

100
101
102
103
104

[Sanskrit manuscript text in Devanagari script, consisting of six horizontal lines of dense characters.]

Handwritten marginal numbers on the left side of the page, including 81 and 82.

First line of handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a form of Indic script.

Second line of handwritten text in a cursive script.

Third line of handwritten text in a cursive script.

Fourth line of handwritten text in a cursive script.

Fifth line of handwritten text in a cursive script.

Vertical text on the left margin, likely a page number or index, written in red ink.

Main body of text consisting of seven horizontal lines of red ink script, likely a form of Sanskrit or a related Indic language, written in a cursive style.

Handwritten marginal notes on the left side of the page, likely serving as a commentary or index.

Line 1 of the main text, written in red ink, containing a complex sequence of characters and symbols.

Line 2 of the main text, written in red ink, continuing the sequence of characters and symbols.

Line 3 of the main text, written in red ink, continuing the sequence of characters and symbols.

Line 4 of the main text, written in red ink, continuing the sequence of characters and symbols.

Line 5 of the main text, written in red ink, containing the final sequence of characters and symbols on the page.